CHRISTMAS is the day of all days of good cheer. Christmas comes but once a year is an old saying, in fact, as old as the day itself but the phrase delights the ear and every one likes to utter it. It is an event welcomed by all, whether religiously inclined or not. It is a day when there prevails among all the spirit of the brotherhood of man, a day upon which it delights every one to realize that some one has thought of his happiness and has manifested an interest in him. In large measure with many it is an annual gleam-time and with these, although they may overlook the event it is supposed to commemorate, it is a day of good things, good thoughts, good motives, and one that benefits. It is even more than this to those of religious inclination. They not only derive all the worldly enjoyment it brings but it places them in closer communion with the One, whose birth the day is intended to keep before the minds of the people. If properly observed it is a day when all men will have a measure of happiness. Some will find it in giving and others in receiving. Remembrances will be made by all classes and conditions according to their ability, showing a spirit of friendship and demonstrating the fact that mankind after all is a single creation and that love is common to the bosoms of all human beings alike. The coming of these annual events has ever worked to the betterment of the people in some way and has strengthened the bond of love among men. If the present event does no more than to maintain or repeat the works of its predecessors, it will have done well.

OBSERVING the usual custom of the newspapers all over the country there will be no issue of the Daily Telegram tomorrow, Christmas. The office will be closed in order to give all connected with it an opportunity to observe the day. We wish all a merry Christmas.

Mr. McKeever officiated. Mr. Riley is connected with the offices of the coal company at Flemington and is a splendid young man. His bride is one of West Milford's accomplished young ladies. They left on the morning accommodation for their future home in Flemington.

LIKE HERCULES.

Among the Dwarfs of Gulliver, was Haught.

Herbert Haught, of Shinnston, gave the city of Fairmont the sum of five dollars this morning. The money was not given in the nature of a present, but rather a ransom. Haught is a young man, and he has good prospects at his native town. He did not care to stay in Fairmont always, so he paid the money for his liberty. He had seventy-five cents left after his liberty had been paid for. Last night he was drunk as one man could be. He swagged up and down the streets several times and hurled a deft at the police. It seemed, to hear Herbert tell it, that all the coppers in forty cities like this could not arrest him. He was a kind of Hercules among the dwarfs of Gulliver. He did not try to make a secret out of it either. If anybody wanted to find out Herbert was perfectly willing. Pretty soon he ran into a small like officer who picked him up by the seat of the pantaloons and the front hair and toted him off to the place where the low and the high mingle together.—Fairmont Times.

Amusements

"Gypsy Jack," Jan. 23

Despite the apparent sway of farce comedy and "show girl" performances the old-fashioned melodrama still claims its devoted adherents. That this is so, without a doubt, is practically proven by the unstinted success which has greeted Willis Granger during his present tour with "Gypsy Jack." Not only is Manager Edward C. White highly pleased with the reception which has greeted his new star, but the latter has, by his intrinsic worth as a melo-dramatic actor, proven his fitness for the role of the kypsy boy, which is the leading character in the production.

Miss Katherine Willard is adding new laurels to her reputation by her rendition of "Aria" in the emotional drama, "The Power Behind the Throne." Miss Willard has proven her ability and exceptional talents in the production, so much so that her tour is one continuous ovation. Nothing is lacking in scenic effect, stage mechanism or costuming to keep "The Power Behind the Throne" up to the topmost standard, while the star's support "play up to her" with admirable skill.
